The Finding of the Public Utilities Commission.

Mrs. Cora Everett, aged about 45 and her daughter, Iva Everett, aged 13, were thrown from an automobile which came in collision with Portland bound passenger train, 1st No. 16 of the Grand Trunk Railway, at the crossing of Nichols street, in South Paris, at 4:55 p. m., July 25, 1915. The daughter was instantly killed, and Mrs. Everett died almost immediately.

The automobile was owned and driven by Mr. John Everett, husband and father of the injured persons. The Everetts live in sight and within a few rods of the crossing and were going home at the time of the accident. The crossing is approached by a slight rise in the street, and the view is of a train approaching from the west, and a rise in the land and the presence of fruit trees on the lot next to the railroad track.

A member of this Commission went to the scene of the accident early the following morning before the automobile was removed, and made investigation sufficient to secure all the material facts.

It appears beyond doubt that the crossing itself was in full view of the occupants of the automobile, that they were familiar with its presence and the operation of trains over it; that they took no pains to ascertain whether a train was approaching, and that the usual train signals were given by whistle and bell. When the automobile came in sight of the crossing, it was too late to avoid the collision.

We are of the opinion that no blame is attributable to the train crew. There are, however, at least three grade crossings, including that at Nichols street near the South Paris station, at which conditions are such that accidents are likely to occur, and to the remedying of which attention ought to be given. The other two are the Gothic street crossing and the crossing of the highway leading from South Paris to Norway. Both were visited at the time of the above investigation, and it is the purpose of the entire Commission to give them further attention in the immediate future.

At the Gothic street crossing, freight tracks are located between the main line and the principal street from which the crossing is approached. When freight cars are left on these tracks close to the crossing, the traveler has no view of the main line until he is close to it. This matter was called to the attention of the local agent of the railway company, who readily promised that such cars should not be left within one hundred feet of the crossing in the future. This will materially improve the condition.

At the crossing between South Paris and Norway, the view of a train approaching from Norway is cut off from travelers going toward Norway. An accident occurred here a short time ago, resulting in the loss of two lives. It is probable that substantial results might be secured here by installing a visible and audible signal, and in view of the great amount of travel on this highway, either this or a flagman would seem to be warranted.

The Commission recommends that the Grand Trunk Railway offer suggestions for the improvement of conditions at these crossings, before it makes a formal order.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS
It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to a chronic sickness and often shortens life.
If your work is tiring, if your nerves are excitable, if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.
It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.
Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. No alcohol.
Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

SOUTH WATERFORD.
Your correspondent deems it a fitting apology to his friends who rely mainly on his reports of local happenings in this section of the county who are patrons of the great county paper, to relate some of the incidents of a recent absence from his home for more than a month in June and July.

On Saturday, June 19, I left home at 6 a. m. and in the company of my general friend, George W. Gray, the efficient mail carrier on the Norway and Waterford route, I went to Rice's Junction which is one of the notable localities of the town since the establishment of the McWain corra packing factory at that place. Here I found a comfortable seat in the North Waterford automobile stage under the skilled chauffeurship of Winifred Knight, who has the faculty of making storage room in and on his three seated vehicle for a ton more or less of passengers, baggage and freight without crowding or discomfort. The day was mostly spent in South Paris, where I had distinct pleasure in meeting by previous appointment, for the first time, a friend whose contributions to the Advertiser and his personal letters to the writer had enhanced my desire to meet him. This interview took place at the residence of Mrs. Rodney Hall on Main street. Who do you think was the gentleman whom I had come to meet? It was Mr. Walter W. Maxim of Paris, who is a contributor of poems and interesting prose articles to the Advertiser and other state papers and out of state journals. This interview was mutually pleasant and I hope to be repeated in the future.

That afternoon I went to Oxford and visited the family, over Sunday, of Dennis and Maude Dovey in East Oxford. Mrs. Dovey is the youngest of the late S. Porterfield Stuart of Harrison and Oxford. Her mother was Matilda, youngest daughter of Stephen and Lydia Waterhouse of Bolster's Mills. They were among the early families settling and residing in that village many years. Mr. Waterhouse erected the dwelling house now the home of A. R. Clark, about 1855, where he resided until six of his children had grown to maturity. He then moved to South Paris and afterward moved to Oxford where he died in 1871. Mrs. Lydia Waterhouse was a daughter of Asa Hicks a resident of Norway village in the early days, removing from Greenwood where some of his family were born. Mrs. Maude Dovey in whose home I was a guest as mentioned is the daughter of sister-in-law, Mrs. Matilda Stuart and that is principally why I am telling my readers why I was visiting that family in the outset of a series of visits in Maine and Massachusetts extending to midsummer.

Monday evening I went to Mechanic Falls to the residence of my comrade and friend, John Moore whose hospitality and kind heartedness to humanity at large are distinguishing traits of his character. He was a drummer boy of Capt. Moses M. Robinson's Company of Col. George F. Bagley's 12th Regiment of Maine Volunteer Infantry in the Civil war. He enlisted in Waterford in 1861 at 16 years of age and after two years service, part of which was spent as a sick boy in a New Orleans army hospital, he was discharged for disability. Since that time of his life he has resided in several states of the west and Pacific coast, pursuing a truly strenuous life. He is a cosmopolitan whom not to know is almost to argue oneself unknown. At this stage of my story I will say, my narrative of my recent experiences of visiting and travel are necessarily so circumstantial and personal that my references to families I have formerly known for several generations must be accepted with indulgence by my readers.

June 22 and 23 were occupied by a trip to Portland and attendance of the annual encampment of the G. A. R. of Maine. On my return to Mechanic Falls I received a letter from a niece in Brooklyn, Mass., inviting me to visit her home. I started next morning, June 24 for Portland and proceeded that night to Boston by Steamer Bay State.

My first day in Boston was spent in making brief calls on several Maine friends residing at the "Hub" and later in the afternoon, I went to Brooklyn finding a welcome reception at the late home of my sister-in-law, whose decease had occurred but a few days before my arrival. The last week in June and, in fact each succeeding week of my sojourn in the "old Bay State" are notable for a succession of very enjoyable visits and interviews with esteemed relatives and friends of the past, nearly all native and former residents of Maine.

At Summer at Reelford streets I called informally on George A. Randall an old Portland chum, for years in a manufacturing trade in the Forest City, for nearly fifty years in business in Boston, receiving a "glad hand" from my friend, who is only recognizable by his face and his voice, his hair being changed from former raven black to snow white. But he is the same old George as I realized when we got seated in his office and rehearsed some of our mutual reminiscences of Dover in the years "before the war." George lives in Roslindale, where he has reared a family of children who are occupying distinguished positions in educational and commercial life.

A short distance from Summer street is School street where I found a busy Boston business man in the person of Henry H. Savage, a native of North Bridgton, youngest son of Capt. Abraham Savage, widely known in former years as a teacher of vocal music in the old fashioned singing school of Maine and now living in Maine counties who remember Singing Master Savage. But I was speaking of Henry who extended a cordial greeting and hand pressure as I entered his sanctum on the floor of a high office building. Henry and I became first acquainted as fellow members of the North Bridgton Brass Band in 1854-4, since which time I had not seen the dear boy until about seven years ago, when he one summer day, while visiting in our "City," became apprised of the presence of his former comrade of old band days and speedily he was at the door to renew his acquaintance of half a century ago. Well I had to be introduced to my gentleman visitor from the "Hub" who was yet retaining much the same ruddiness of complexion, but, at first I could not "place him among the friends of my youth." Well we spent an hour seemingly only a few minutes in living over the old times, and since then I have had a pleasant reunion with Henry at his beautiful home in Wakefield or Greenwood as it is known, where my friend is a most substantial citizen, as he is also a successful merchant and real estate operator in Boston. This time I was indebted to Mr. Savage for special favors of advice and assistance in prosecuting the objects of my visit to the metropolis which are some of the most grateful recollections of my month of exploration of the surface and subterranean thoroughfares of Boston.

Festival at Bridgton.
The Saco Valley Music Festival which was held at Bridgton was assuredly a big success. Hundreds of automobiles were lined up before the hall where the festival was held. Seven hundred people were turned away on account of lack of space, every seat in the hall, with the addition of an extra hundred, and standing room, being occupied. The artists were almost deluged with flowers. The participants were enthusiastic and the unbounded enthusiasm of the members of the large audience was a feature of the occasion. All this makes the annual midsummer festival at Bridgton an established occurrence. Six dozen American Beauty roses from the chorus were received by Madame Frensdad, besides a large number of other lovely floral tributes, and when the great singer returned to the stage to acknowledge the applause she insisted that Mr. Cain accompany her, to thus share in the glorious triumph. The Men's Singing Club of North Conway and also the selections by the semi-choir were very much enjoyed and well received. At the annual meeting of the Festival Association, the following officers were elected:
President—Frederick O. Seckerson.
Vice-President—Dr. A. G. Hebb.
Secretary and Treasurer—Allen Clark.
Directors—Ruth L. Tucker, Steep Falls; A. G. Hebb, M. D., Bridgton; W. T. Norton, Kennebunk; John M. Barr, Kennebunk; Harry L. Boothby, Limington; Mrs. Z. O. Wentworth, Fryburg; George W. Our Advertising is Meant To be Helpful

Each year there are many young men in Oxford County starting in business; they are unfamiliar with the real help that a progressive, conservative Bank can be to them.

Many are just beginning to earn; some of them will be influenced to save by opening a bank account by our articles on banking.

There are those also to whom the Bank's exchange and collection facilities are an advantage, or they may be interested in placing their money at interest or buying Travelers' Cheques. And so through every branch of banking.

It is important for all of these people to know the facilities that good banking affords; perhaps it is quite as important for them to know the special features of convenience and advantage that have been steadily developed and perfected in this Bank as it is for us to make them known.

Hence it is that we not only publish advertisements from time to time, but try to put into them as much information as possible.
On the basis of real banking service we are pleased to invite additional accounts from corporations, firms and individuals, each of whom is certain of every courtesy, every service, every accommodation that a strong, conservative, completely equipped Bank can render.
